A nun is driving down the road. She's a nursing sister making a delivery of bedpans to a Catholic hospice. Suddenly her car splutters to a halt. It's run out of petrol, so the nun walks up to the nearest garage and asks to borrow a petrol can so she can refill her tank. "Sorry, sister," says the petrol pump attendant, "we don't have any cans to lend out." The sister has a brainwave. She goes back to the car and takes one of the steel bedpans out of the boot, goes back to the garage and has the bedpan filled with half a gallon of petrol. The nun walks back to the car with her bedpan full of petrol and carefully starts pouring it into the car's tank. Two Rabbis notice her doing this from the other side of the road. One says to the other, "If that car starts, I'm turning Catholic".

July's Catholic Voice is available – please take one home with you.
